About Prof. Les Back

Prof. Les Back teaches Sociology and Urban Studies at Goldsmiths College, University of London. He has been critically analyzing multicultural state of youth culture in London from the perspective of race studies, urban studies and ethnography. Among his works are Art of Listening (2007, Berg), Out of Whiteness: Color, Politics, and Culture (with Vron Ware, 2002, University of Chicago Press), and New Ethnicities and Urban Culture: Racisms and multiculturalism in young lives (1996, UCL Press, later reprinted from Routledge). He also had a conversation with Stuart Hall in Cultural Studies Vol.23, No.4, in 2009.

Convivial Football

Everyone is welcomed.

Date:

28th June, 2014 17:20pm–18:20pm

Place:

International Christian University, Sport Field

It is surely a good thing to think with your brain, but always doing so you'll get bored, won't you? Sometimes you need to practice cultural studies using your bodies. Coincidentally, one of the biggest national/global sports spectacles, FIFA World Cup, will be held in the opposite of the globe. So let us make a counter-performance through football, that is, "Convivial Football" ! Two aims: to make our convivial space through appropriating the popularity of football as a popular culture; to disarticulate this national, masculine, and athlete-specific body culture through our convivial physical practices. Let's make a football space where different people can commit and enjoy in different ways and nobody will be denied his/her presence, since this is an exercise to make such a society. As Stuart Hall might say, "the capacity to play with difference is the coming question of the football in twenty-first century." You need no football shoes and no uniform. Anybody can come to play. The new artificial pitch of International Christian University is just waiting for you.
